THE STOKES TRIAL ENDED.

Edward S. Stokes, convicted Saturday Jan. 4th, of the murder of James Fisk, Jr., was brought into court the following Monday morning to receive sentence. He was sentenced to be hanged on Friday the 28th day of February next, being the shortest time that could be legally allowed the murderer. In answer to the question why sentance of death should not be passed upon him, Stokes said that he had not intentionally violated any law, and that the testamony upon which he was convicted was manufactured and perjured.

We, as no doubt everybody else, are somewhat surprised at the conviction of Stokes for this murder. It has been so difficult for some years past, especially in New York city, to secure a verdict of guilty against a murderer—indeed against any other class of criminals—and so many have escaped entirely, or only been for a short time imprisoned, that we had about made up our minds that Stokes, whatever else might happen to him, was as liable to die a natural death as any one not guilty of so terrible a crime.

The theory of the defence rested mainly on the testimony of Stokes himself and that theory received as little credance from the jury as it did from every body else. No body has had any doubt of his guilt since the day he slew his victim on the stairs of the hotel. Just as little faith do we attach to the story of the finding of Fisk's pistol on the stairs. The whole fabric of the defence was thrown down by the evidence of the bullet hole in Fisk's cloak, which showed that it was impossible for him to have had a pistol in his hands. We are glad that such a virdict has been rendered. We think that it may have a tendancy to elevate the character of the administration of justice in New York. It may possibly be a salutary warning that crime cannot stalk abroad at noonday unchallanged, no matter how high may be the social position of the offender, and no where on the continent was there greater need of such a warning than in that den of sin and iniquity—New York city. We take this, therefore, as an indication of the growing impatience of the public with the flimsy pleas so often and so successfully urged in extenuation of the crime of murder. We have never believed, no matter what the provocation, that a man should take the law into his own hands, to be his own executioner. If one may do it and escape, why may not another? It is a poor rule that will not do for all in this Republican country whether he be of high or low degree and if we may all be allowed to redress our little personal wrongs, then there is the end of all law and anarchy would reign supreme, but some would say he is an educated man and a gentleman, his is one of the first families of New York, he has money and influence and a large circle of friends. So much the worse. "To him to whom much has been given much will be required." If Stokes had been a poor ignorant mortal reared in some den of infamy and accustomed to crime from his youth up, his would have been less in the sight of God than now; but how different with every social advantage that money could buy. Educated, refined and gentlemanly, he has descended to the low level of the murderer.

Our faith in New York justice however, is not yet strong enough to lead us to believe that Stokes will be executed. A motion in arrest of judgment will be made and the case may go to a higher court on exceptions, and there it will be strange, if upon some specious plea a new trial is not ordered to result in acquittal.

Gov. DIX and Lieutenant Governor Robison were inaugurated at Albany on the first of January. The retiring Governor, Hoffman, made a fine address in which he paid a high compliment to Gen. Dix for his distinguished services and the ability and fidelity he had displayed during his career. Gen. Dix replied in a feeling and appropriate manner, and accepted the high trust conferred on him.

A BILL has passed the Legislature fixing the Governor's salary at $9,000. It will undoubtedly be signed and become a law.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

We regret that we are not able to furnish the Governor's message in full this week; but it is impossible for us to do so owing to the immense pressure of business on our hands at this time. It is altogether too lengthy to find a place in our regular issue, and we have not time to issue a supplement. We will, therefore, give our readers a brief synopsis. It commences with a brief reference to the cause we have for thanksgiving to that Almighty Providence whose will controls the destinies of all. In speaking of the Boston fire, he says:

"While we have been exempt from the calamity by fire that has befallen the metropolis of a great sister State, her misfortune has inured to the benefit of our sympathy for the suffering which is one of the most ennobling sentiments of the human heart."

He also speaks of the late political conflict as naveing resulted in a signal triumph of the same principles that were asserted in the restoration of the Union, the amendments of the constitution and the reconstruction of the state. The victory in Pennsylvania was decisive of the victory in the nation; and will ever be remembered as an inestimable contribution to the harmony, prosperity and glory of the country. The election of the soldier, who "is first in war," to the office that makes him "first in peace," was an appropriate exhibition of national gratitude, and inspires the deepest feelings of satisfaction "in the hearts of his countrymen."

The finances of the Commonwealth are in a very satisfactory condition showing total amount in the treasury Nov. 30th 1872 $1,432,455,61 the total amount of State debt paid during the Fiscal year was $2,476,326 making the amount of State debt paid in the last six years $10,992,662.50 being over 29 per cent. of the entire indebtedness. We have also given away to various charities and educational project $17,000,000 paid the ordinary expence of Government and the interest on the State debt. What State can show a better record? The Governor very strongly urges the necessity of a geological survey and this matter seems to us to be of so much importance to all interested in the rapid growth of the State and the developement of our immence natural recources that we quote in part his exact words.

"Assurance have been given by the officers of the "United States coast survey" of the great interest they will take in our state, in the event they carry out their intention to cross the continent to connect the "ocean lines of coast surveys." This connection will pass through Pennsylvania, and will materially assist in determining and establishing one or more points in each county through which the line will pass, and in triangulating so far as to enable us to rectify our county maps and connect them in a correct map of the state. And as the state geologist progresses with his studies and examinations, he should cause to be accurately represented upon the corrected maps, by colors and other appropriate means, the various areas occupied by the different geological formations, and place them in possession of the people, for their information, prior to the completion and publication of a full account of the survey.

A state map of the kind indicated, with all the discoveries marked in proper colors thereon, would give to the thousands of visitors from our own country and from foreign lands, who will attend the centennial celebration, some approximate idea of the incalculable wealth beneath the soil of our state; and would have an importance in their sight that could be conveyed to them in no other possible manner.

The expenses of a geological corps, properly organized, and such as would be competent to perform the duties required, have been carefully estimated, and will not exceed forty-five thousand dollars for the first year, and need not be quite as much annually thereafter. In recommending this measure two years ago, I said: "For want of a proper bureau of statistics, and a corps of observation and publication to collate and relate the facts of our geology and mineralogy as they have appeared, the state has already suffered severely. Much valuable information has been lost, never to be recovered; and but little certain knowledge of past mining, and other scientific operations, has been preserved to govern and assist the future engineer. It is therefore, neither wise nor just policy to delay this work under the pretext that it may be more perfectly effected at some future time. There is a present necessity for it though the time never will come when such a work can be considered perfect. New developments in mineral resources, as well as additional acquirements in scientific knowledge, will constantly be made as long as the world exists. The sooner, therefore, in my opinion, a thorough survey is authorized, the better it will be for the prospective interests of the state, as well as for its present necessities."

The golden destiny of the Pacific states may well be envied; but our coal, ore, oil, lumber and soil are a much better foundation for wealth and permanent greatness than the products of all their placers, and the transient prosperity they have produced. Let us build upon an enduring basis and the world will forever pay a golden tribute to our products and industries—the true wealth of Pennsylvania.

He urges an appropriation to put the Bureau of Labor statistics and of Agriculture in working order. An Act establishing a Bureau of Labor statistics and Agriculture was approved April 12, 1872. Thomas C. McDowell, of Dauphin county, was appointed Commissioner. His duties embrace the examination of nearly all the varied industries of the State, viz.: To collect, compile and systematize statistics with reference to labor in its relations to the social, educational, industrial and general condition; wages and treatment of all classes of working people and how the same affected our prosperity and productive industry. To collect and classify statistics relating to the mineral, manufacturing, agricultural and commercial production of the State, and to report annually to the Legislature the result of his investigations. The Act does not appropriate any money to defray the expenses of the department, and leaves the Commissioner without any means to obtain it, except by the voluntary act of business men. This, he thinks, was an oversight which will be corrected by an appropriation as will enable the Commissioner to procure from the proper sources the information required to carry out the interest of the law.

When it is remembered that Pennsylvania ranks second in population; second in manufactures; sixth as a wheat growing state, and first in point of mineral wealth and resources, among the states of the Union; it should not be a question of dollars and cents, whether her vast and varied resources shall be left to be developed by the slow process of casual discover, or be properly introduced to the notice of capitalists at home and abroad, by authorized and official statements of facts.

The information that will be furnished, will not only be of great practical value to the citizens of the state, but it will afford the representatives of the people, who are charged from year to year with the responsibilities of legislation, the best and most compendious source of information, the importance of which can only be estimated by experience.

Pennsylvania stands pre-eminent for her minerel resources, possessing, as she does, the only known anthracite cool fields, of any consequence, whilst her iron ores and oil are a source of inexhaustible wealth, that defies computation. A few items only are necessary to prove the correctness of these remarks. The production of coal, from the anthracite regions, in 1820 was 365 tons; in 1870 it reached the enormous amount of 19,951,585 tons, and it is estimated that the product will be swelled in 1872 to upwards of 22,000,000 tons. If the increase in the production of anthracite coal has been so rapid and wonderful in a period of fifty-two years, who can estimate its growth within the next half century? The product of our bituminous coal fields in 1870 foots up 14,968,465 tons. The two make an aggregate of 34,920,050 tons for that year.

Meanwhile, the development and growth of the oil production of the northwestern counties almost challenges the credulity of our people. From August, 1859 when Drake sunk the first well, to the close of 1864, the production was 221,000,000 gallons, yielding the sum of $29,820,000. In 1864 about 62,000,000 gallons were refined, the average price of which, bond, at New York, sixty-two cents per gallon, gave a value of $38,440,000. The entire production, up to 1868, was 327,692,524 gallons, equal to 8,493,339 barrels of crude oil.

In view of all the facts connected with the bureau of statistics. I most earnestly bespeak for it liberal appropriation, as well as the fostering care of the legislature.

The Congressional apportionment bill of last year is briefly alluded to, and the reasons for its not receiving the Executive approval are that it is highly objectionable in many of its features; and Congress then had under consideration a supplemental bill proposing an increase of representatives, that would give one additional member to this State. This afterwards became a law, thereby giving to Pennsylvania twenty-six, as provided for in the legislative enactment of the last session. The latter having failed to receive executive approval, the congressional elections last October were held under the former law, and the three additional members apportioned to the State were chosen as members at large by the vote of the whole people. Hence, the duty of enacting another apportionment bill devolves upon the present legislature, and he requests for it that careful and patriotic consideration required by the magnitude of the interests involved.

Our system of general education is treated upon at some length. He recommends, among other things, upon this very important subject, the adoption of a compulsory system of education, although he thinks there is no doubt but that a law to this effect would encounter opposition, for the opponents of such a measure are already marshaling their forces. In Norway, Sweden and Prussia, this system was first adopted, and such have been its salutary effects that other European governments have made haste to follow their example. Austria, admonished by the defeat at Sadowa, France by the chrushing disaster at Sedan, and England by the possibility of a real "battle of Dorking," have decreed by a statute that all their children shall be taught to read and write, influenced by a conviction that knowledge gives an increased prowess in war as well as capacity and integrity for the peaceful pursuits of life. And it is a fact of striking significance that none of the states that have passed such enactments have abandoned or repealed them.

The National Guard numbers 13,586 enlisted men, 1,126 non-commissioned officers—divided into fifteen regiments and six battalions, embracing three hundred and twenty-three companies—six are artillery, eight cavalry and three hundred and nine infantry.

In closing, he pays a just tribute to our newly elected Governor, Major General John F. Hartranft, in these words:

"Has signally illustrated his courage and patriotism on many fiercely contested fields of battle; and qualities, that have made his reputation as a soldier, have been no less conspicious in the pursuits of civil life. He will bring to the discharge of his duties a large and valuable experience in the management of public affairs; and all that is known of his antecedents may be regarded as a guaranty for that confidence of the people who have elevated him to the gubernatorial chair by so large a majority, I bespeak for him your hearty co-operation in guarding and advancing the public interests; and I earnestly invoke Heaven's choicest blessings upon the people of Pennsylvania—that their abundance may never be diminished—and that her honored name may shine in the galaxy of the American Union with increasing splendor forever."

THE BOOM QUESTION.

We publish elsewhere, a communication on the question of a reduction of boomage in the Williamsport boom, which is just now attracting great attention among our lumbermen, and greatly affects the lumbering interests. It is the old question of money against the interests of the people—of individual gain against public good. In all such questions we shall be found on the side of the many as against the few, of the public good as against private greed.

If the statements of our correspondent are correct, and we see no reason to doubt them, this subject needs the earnest attention of our Legislature.—We see no reason why any corporation should make a profit of $240,000 upon an invested capital of $60,000, which would be equivalent to a profit of four hundred per cent. per annum. This profit, when filched from the pockets of the consumers of lumber, ought to be regulated in some way by law, and we join most heartily in the call which is made upon our Legislature to reduce the charge for boomage which is now regulated by law.

P. T. BURNUM, the unterrified showman, is going to re-build his museum which was burnt by fire lately in New York. He has ordered his agent in Europe, to expend $500,000 in the purchase of animals and attractions for his new museum. By the 1st of April, he expects to start again in the show business even more attractive than ever before. He thinks that his museum was fired by an incendiary. It is said that he had a wax figure of Jeff. Davis dressed in petticoats, and a short time before the fire he received an anonymous letter warning him that if he did not remove it his museum would be burned. He paid no attention to the threat, and soon after his great show was in ashes. A few days after the fire, he received another letter evidently written by the same person, saying, "We gave you warning, and now we have accomplished our threat.

DEATH OF THE EX-EMPEROR NAPOLEON III.

PARTICULARS OF THE EVENT.

EXCITEMENT IN LONDON AND PARIS.

LONDON, Jan. 9.

The ex-Emperor Napoleon Third of France, expired at about quarter of eleven o'clock this morning, at Chiselhurst, from the effects of the several operations for stone in the bladder that he has undergone in the last week. The event created the utmost excitement throughout England as well as France and all the countries of Europe.

PARTICULARS OF THE LAST ILLNESS AND DEATH OF THE EX-EMPEROR NAPOLEON.

CHISELHURST, Jan. 9.

Since last evening, when the condition of the patient was pronounced critical, Napoleon grew rapidly worse, and the night was almost passed in total sleeplessness.

The great physical strength and endurance which he had exhibited gave way, and the patient became utterly prostrated by weakness.

Dr. Gull, Dr. Thomson and several other eminent physicians and surgeons were in constant attendance at the bedside.

His grave condition attracted to the bedside many friends and adherents to his cause. Last evening the throng of visitors to Chiselhurst was something remarkable.

His acute sufferings during the night, which the skill of the physicians failed to alleviate, met with the sympathetic response from those around him.

His faithful consort, the ex-Empress Eugenie, had been with him almost hourly from the beginning of his sickness. Her grief at her husband's death is very great.

Up to a late hour last night hopes were still entertained for the recovery of the Emperor; but, as the night wore on and the morning approached, these were abandoned.

Only his near relatives and a few of his most intimate friends were permitted to remain in the sick chamber.

Towards morning the patient sank rapidly. His sufferings had somewhat abated, this slight cessation being followed by symptoms of extreme weakness. The same state of affairs continued during this forenoon, the patient still continuing to sink, and the pulse growing visibly weaker.

At ten o'clock his friends gathered around him to witness the last scene. The deepest grief was visible on the faces of all present. Napoleon's pulse continued to grow feebler, until at 10:45 A. M., when the physician announced that all was over. The ex-Emperor, was dead.

THE EMPEROR'S DEATH IN LONDON.

LONDON, Jan. 9.

The announcement of the death of Napoleon, though not totally unexpected, created a profound sensation in this city. In the aristocratic circles a general and deep sympathy is expressed for the ex-Empress and the Prince Imperial. The Bonapartists in London are much depressed over the calmity, and will meet at an early date to take suitable action regarding the death of their leader.

RECEPTION OF THE NEWS IN PARIS—GREAT EXCITEMENT.

PARIS, Jan. 9—Afternoon.

The news from England, received today, announcing the death of Napoleon, caused the most intense excitement here. In official quarters it is the sole topic of discussion.

The citizens are in a perfect ferment of excitement. Crowds are assembled at the various newspaper bulletins, discussing the situation and the probable action of the Bonapartist faction, which has now lost its head. Such excitement has not been witnessed in the streets of Paris since the war with Germany. The Imperialist members in the Assembly are much concerned over the intelligence and express strong sympathy for the Empress and her son.

The career of the deceased Emperor furnishes a very fruitful subject of study both in politics and morals. His success and the adulation which followed upon it seemed to confuse the mind as to the true foundations of greatnes, and although Kinglake had as early as 1854 discovered the real weakness of the man, it was not until the French German war, which resulted in his overthrow, that the whole world saw what a poor idol it was which had been so blindly worshiped.

In 1836 Louis Napoleon got up a sham revolution at Strasbourg, which was speedily put down, and Louis Phillipe, instead of having him executed, consented, at the earnest entreaties of his mother, to banish him. He came to this country, and also visited South America. In 1840 he landed at Boulogne with his tame eagle, was arrested and sentenced to imprisonment in the fortress of Ham, from which he escaped.

In 1848, during the revolution of that date, he was chosen a deputy to the National assembly; professed to be a Republican, was made president of the Republic and on the 2d of December, 1851, declared Paris in a state of seige, dissolved the assembly, sent members to prisons, shot down people in the streets, had himself elected president for ten years, and in 1851 made Emperor by a vote upon a plebiscitum. For a graphic account of this transaction see Eugene Tenot's work.

In 1853 he married Eugenie, Countess de Teba. In 1854, in conjunction with England, he declared war against Russia. In 1859-60 he made war in conjunction with Italy against Austria, and claimed Savoy for his services. In 1861 he prosecuted his war in Mexico and led the unfortunate Maximillian into the fatal blunder of accepting the Mexican crown. He endeavored to persuade England into recognizing the independence of our Southern insurgents, but failed.

In July, 1870, he declared war against Prussia, and conducted it in such a bungling manner as to bring upon France a series of military disasters without a parallel. Since his overthrow he has lived in retirement in England, every now and then going through the amusing formality of inspecting cannon, having the whim that he was a very capable judge of all artillery matters.

He was born April 20, 1808, and was reputed to be the third son of Louis Bonaparte and Hortense, the daughter of the Empress Josephine, by her first marriage. He gave Paris many public works of beauty and utility, and with the aid of the clergy and the army kept order in France during many years.—But the ablest and purest Frenchmen have borne ample witness to the debauchery of public morals during his reign, and that he was a thoroughly unprincipled man can scarcely be doubted by any one who has closely studied his career. He obtained his high position by fraud, perjury and force, and he lost it by the want of courage to say to his people, "You have no just cause of war and I will abdicate rather than plunge you in a causeless war."

By the side of such a memory as Washington has left the world, this dead, dethroned potentate invites no tender touches from any pen, least of all from Americans, whose Republic he desired to destroy. He was for a time a successful political gambler, and he expended a portion of his money in beautifying Paris. If he was much more or did much more we will let his eulogists and defenders tell the story.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

—President Hopkins, of Williams College, is thoroughly good and greatly loved and he is a stately and dignified old gentleman withal. All these excellent qualities added a quaint effect of contrast to the suddeness of the following answer, which the worthy President once received, and which illustrates the principle that "ridicule is the test of truth." In the railroad cars one day the President decried one of his students, a youth of regretable habits in point of dissipation, and wearing at that moment the haggard and disheveled looks of one not yet over the effects of a debauch. Stepping up to the young man, looking him sternly yet sadly in the face, the President said, in a deep and impressive tone: Been on a drunk?" "So have I," was the answer.

IN the Senate of the United States on Jan. 8, provision was made for paying the expenses of the committee to investigate the Alabama and Louisiana election troubles. The shape that the matter is taking is not very promising. The House was engaged in the consideration of appropriations. A futile attempt was made in this body to pass the bill increasing the President's salary to $50,000 per annum.

MRS. ANNA MARGARET TURNER died in Philadelphia, a few days ago, at the age of one hundred and one years. She had lived in the house where she died for more than seventy years, for the last twenty-five years almost entirely alone. She scorned the "new-fangled notions" of gas and coal, and used hickory wood and candles to the last.

BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN

BELLEFONTE, PA.

Wednesday Morning, Jan. 15th, 1873.

THE PUREST PEARL.

FROM THE GERMAN.

Beside the church door, weary and lone,
A blind woman sat on the cold door stone;
The wind was bitter, the snow fell fast,
And a mocking voice in the fitful blast
Seemed ever to echo her moaning cry,
As she begged her alms of the passers-by:
"Have pity on me, have pity, I pray;
My back is bent and my hair is gray."

The bells were ringing the hour of prayer,
And many good people were gathered there,
But covered with furs and mantles warm,
They hurried past through the wintry storm.

Some were hoping their souls to save.
And some were thinking of death and the grave,
And, alas! they had no time to heed
The poor soul asking for charity's meed,
And some were blooming with beauty's grace,
But closely muffled in veils of lace;
They saw not the sorrow and heard not the moan
Of her who sat on the cold door stone.

At last came one of a noble name,
By the city counted the wealthiest dame,
And the pearls that over her neck were strung
She proudly there to the beggar flung.

Then followed a maiden young and fair,
Adorned with clusters of golden hair;
But her dress was thin, and scanty and worn
Not even the beggar seemed more forlorn,
With a tearful look, and a pitying sigh,
She whispered soft, "No jewels have I—
But I give you my prayers, good friend," said she,
"And surely I know God listens to me."

On the poor white hand, so shrunken and small,
The blind woman felt a tear-drop fall,
Then kissed it, and said to the weeping girl,
"It is you who have given the purest pearl."

TWO EVENTS IN A QUIET LIFE.

BY E. CLAXTON.

CHAPTER THE FIRST.

It was the third day of December, and the fourth was fixed as my wedding day. For some weeks the weather had been bitterly cold, we had one heavy fall of snow, then a few days of hard frost, and now the air was again filled with large feathery flakes. At four o'clock, when I went to my own room wearied out both in mind and body, it was nearly dark.

My uncle's house, of which I had been an inmate for some years—for I was an orphan—was in a remote part of Cambridgeshire, five miles from a town, and it may easily be imagined what an event a wedding was in such a quiet village.—Every one, including myself, the bride elect, had to work hard for days beforehand, and my aunt had little sympathy for the weak or the idle.

Two or three guests had arrived, and as there now seemed nothing more to to be done excepting to entertain them, I was sent up stairs to rest until seven o'clock, when my intended husband and his groomsman were expected. The dog-cart was to be sent to meet them at Eldon station, about three miles off.

I found the unusual luxury of a bright fire burning in my grate, with an easy chair cozily drawn up to it. For a moment or two I warmed my frozen fingers, and then I went to the window, and leaning my cold forehead against the colder pane, looked out upon the dreary landscape. Now the moment was come in which to realize my position.

For weeks I had been in a dream—a passive, hopeless creature, carried along, as it seemed, by the will of others to a certain end—now on the eve of my wedding-day I felt miserably awake. Could there then be no respite—nothing to hope for.

"Ah, Harry! Harry Roman!" I exclaimed, "where are you now? Why this long, long time without a line, without a word? Have I not, in spite of taunts and entreaties, waited the seven years I promised, and more? Was it not only when the bread of charity grew too bitter, and no means permitted me for earning my own livelihood—when no hope remained of seeing you again—that I gave way?

"Twice I had refused Mr. Denton's hand. What could I do when he offered it the third time? I mean, Heaven knows I mean to make him a good wife. I am grateful to him, for why should he choose me—a girl without a penny, and no heart worth having? They say I have a pretty face; I suppose it was that.—Harry used to like my blue eyes and wavy hair years ago.

"This is the last night I may think of you, Harry, the bonny lad I loved so well! Where are you now? Still beyond the wide Atlantic, striving for the money to enable us to marry? or as they would wish me to believe, dead? I am in sore distress, Harry. Surely, bound up as we were in one another, my spirit can hardly thus be moved without stirring some chord in yours, wherever you may be—whether in far America, or in that still stranger and unknown country from whence no traveler returns.

"God help me," I cried, in my anguish; "God help me, I sorely need it."

Then I opened the window, and looked out over the flat country lying so still in its white shroud; and I gazed up into the gray, stony sky, but it was obscured by the flakes of snow, which came down thicker and thicker until at last nothing else was to be seen in earth or heaven."

"Miss Nellie! Miss Nellie!" said the warning voice of the old housekeeper, "what are you doing, my dear? Trying to catch your death of cold? and to-morrow your wedding day!" she drew me away and closed the window. "I've got a nice cup of tea for you; come and sit down, lovely, and drink it. I don't wonder you feel anxious like, for it's awful weather.

Then the good old soul sat down by the fire, and told me various stories, which she assured me were authentic, of similar circumstances, and how when her own mother was married, in Staffordshire, the wedding-party had to walk to church over the tops of the hedges on frozen snow.

Then my aunt came in; she was a naturally stern managing woman and we had never been good friends; but she spoke kindly to me then, and told me not to be anxious if the train was delayed a little. My uncle soon followed her, and gave me a kiss, saying, "Cheer up, Nellie! they'll be here sooner or later."

Ah! what a hypocrite I was! None of them knew my dread of the coming morrow; how I prayed like a criminal for a reprieve. And yet, to do myself justice I did honor Mr. Denton, I meant to obey, and I hoped in time to love him.—But the hours passed on, and even I began to grow anxious for his safety.

Ten o'clock came, and the groom had not returned from the station. Old Wilkie, the gardener, who had managed to struggle in from his cottage, about a hundred yards, distance, gave it as his opinion that they would not come that night.

"Lor' bless you, sir," he said, "James knows what he's about, and he'd never risk crossing Eldon Moor such weather as this; it's as much as their lives are worth."

My uncle kissed me again. "Never mind, Nellie; they won't hurt in the station for one night, with a big fire, and we'll have them over the first thing in the morning;" and so at last we retired for the night.

To bed, but not to sleep. A new hope had sprung up, which I hardly dared acknowledge to myself. If the storm would only continue until twelve o'clock the next day, so as to make the wedding impossible, who could tell what might happen next? I might be taken ill; had I not pains in my limbs, and was not my head burning already?

I rose several times during the night, and looked out. Still snowing heavily, as far as I could see. In the morning there was no change, and a very gloomy and depressed party met at the breakfast table. A few unsuccessful attempts were made to be cheerful during the meal, but when it was over all was silence, except an occasional whisper from one of the anxious faces at the windows, trying vainly to peer through the thick white veil.

That it was useless to dress, all had agreed, and, wrapped in a large shawl, I lay on the sofa by the fire, with my eyes fixed on the clock. Ten o'clock—eleven. At the half hour my heart almost stopped beating. Twelve o'clock at last—and so the reprieve had come.—but hardly had the stroke sounded when a maid-servant burst into the room.

"Come quick, sir; there is a messenger."

My aunt and uncle followed her quickly. I rose also, but staggered and sank on the sofa.

"Sit still, Nellie," said my bridesmaid, Mary Lee; and she ran after them, followed by the other guests.

They seemed a long time away, and at last I got up, and like one in a dream groped my way to the kitchen.

It was a large gloomy place at any time, and that morning there was no light from without, the panes were so blocked up with snow; only the fire lighted up the group before me. The messenger—a tall, strong navy, but evidently much exhausted—sat by the hearth, the melting snow forming a pool around him.—My aunt, seated at the table, looked as if she were fainting, while my uncle questioned the man in a subdued voice.—Every face looked pale and horrified.

"What is the matter?" I asked, and my voice sounded to myself as if it were a long way off.

"There has been an accident with the dog-cart, Nellie," said Mary Lee, putting her arm around me.

"Is any one hurt?"

A pause. "Mr. Denton is hurt, my dear," said my uncle.

"Much?" I whispered, for my voice seemed to have gone from me.

I looked from one to the other as no answer came, and then my uncle tried to lead me away.

I understood now how it was.

"He is dead!" I said, and fell heavily on the floor.

CHAPTER THE SECOND.

It is about two years since I wrote anything in my diary, for I seem now too busy to attend to it, and yet things have altered very much in the last two years. My surroundings are changed, and I trust there is a change for the better in myself. During my long illness, which followed that awful snowstorm, my aunt heard of the death of her son-in-law in India, my cousin Edith's husband, and it was arranged for the widow and her only child to return to the old home. This rendered my presence even less necessary than ever, and it made it all the more easy for my dear old friend and doctor to propose a scheme he had formed for the mutual benefit of his wife and myself, as he kindly put it.

It was for me to live with them as companion, housekeeper, and in fact daughter, for they never had children of their own, and his wife was a confirmed invalid. With this new home, health returned both to body and mind. For some years I had lived in a world of my own, with but one object and one end in view. I thought that I tried to do my duty—to bear patiently the monotonous routine of my uncle's house—not to reply to my aunt's often harsh words. I taught in the schools, made flannels for the poor; and yet I lived really and truly for myself, with but little sympathy for those immediately around me.

There was a different atmosphere in Dr. Franshaw's house. His noble, untiring work amongst the sick and suffering filled me with wonder and admiration, and so did the patience and unselfishness of his gentle, ladylike wife, who had been confined to her couch with a spinal complaint for many years.

In a few months, however, came a great trial. The strong man fell sick, and died; I nursed him to the last, and I promised never to leave his poor wife.—It was a sad blow to her at first, but borne with her usual quiet cheerfulness. I know she thinks her time here will be but short, and the hope of a happy meeting with him she loved is her chief solace. I too am resigned and happy. The doctor's will has removed one source of anxiety as to the future, and I am now eight-and twenty, and feel that I can settle down thankfully in that state of life in which it has pleased a good God to place me.

I can even write calmly of Harry, who I know is alive, and getting on well. Of course he is nothing to me now, and I dare say has almost forgotten me in all these years. Well! such things will happen in the chances and changes of life, but I shall never forget him. He will choose some other wife, and I hope they will be happy, but she will not love him better than Nellie of old.

Here I was interrupted by a ring at the bell, and a note. To my great surprise, it was from Mrs. Leedon (Harry's mother), asking me to call upon her in the afternoon. What could she want? Nine years ago she and aunt broke off the engagement between Harry and me.

Ah! it was a hard and cruel time! We were as they said, foolish, penniless young creatures; but then we loved each other, and he was willing to work, and I to wait. But that was all over now.

After our early dinner I made the invalid comfortable for her afternoon nap and started for a two-mile walk.

A bright winter afternoon, clear pale sky, hard roads, and glittering hoar-frost lying on trees and hedges. I soon reached Mrs. Leedon's cottage. She looked I thought, much aged, and there was an unusual nervousness in her manner.

After a little attempt at conversation she said, "Ellen, I hope in what happened some years ago, you gave me, at least credit for conscientious motives."

"Mrs. Leedon," I replied, hastily, "that time is long past, and I have no wish to recall it."

"But, my dear, you must see now what an imprudent thing an engagement would have been."

I rose to go. "It is all over, Mrs. Leedon, I repeat. Right or wrong, what was then done can never be undone."

"Stay a moment, Ellen. What I have to tell you is of such importance, that I must beg you to hear me patiently." She took me by the hand and drew me to the sofa by her.

"At that time I acted, as I still think for the best; but two years ago I fear I made a mistake—that is, your aunt and I. Soon after your engagement to Mr. Denton I received a letter from my son considerably after date, enclosing one for you. He told me that he purposed coming home in a few months, and as he had now an appointment which would enable him to marry, he hoped to persuade you to return with him as his wife. As your uncle had forbidden any correspondence, he enclosed the letter for you in mine."

I sprang to my feet. "And why did I not have that letter?"

"Be calm, Ellen. Indeed, my dear, I am now very sorry. I took my letter to show to your uncle and aunt, and by their advice destroyed the enclosure. They thought you were at last settled in your mind, and happy; and, of course, wished to avoid such a terrible upset as a renewal of the past would have caused."

"It was a shameful breach of trust, Mrs. Leedon," I exclaimed, vehemently, "and cruel, very cruel! I was no young child to be treated so," and I buried my face in my hands. Where now was my boasted self-possession? I was sobbing bitterly. At last I raised my head. "And what did Harry say when he heard of it?"

"My poor child," cried Mrs. Leedon, "he said nothing—only that there was now no reason for his return to England."

"I must go now," I said faintly, for I felt worn out and miserable. "Do not send for me, or ever speak of it again, please."

Her eyes were full of tears as she accompanied me to the door.

"Try to forgive me, Nellie. I would give much for you to meet each other again. At all events, he knows the truth now. Don't think too hardly of me!"

As I crossed the field which lay between Mrs. Leedon's house and the high road my mind was full of confusion; grief and indignation predominated, and then a wild hope suddenly sprang up but that brought me to myself. "This is madness," I thought; "I am but laying the foundation for future disappointment and sorrow."

Before I passed through the gate I folded my hands upon it, closed my eyes, and muttered, "Thy will be done" then I dried my eyes and walked quickly homewards. As I gazed round on the wide, flat fields, and straight road, I could not help likening the landscape to my life. Sameness, monotony, and when it should please God to take my own kind friend from me, great loneliness. And yet it need not be unhappy, summer would come in its season to brighten the fields, and even now the hoar-frost was sparkling in the sun. And then I had the privilege of a straight path of duty which could not be mistaken.

The long road seemed to stretch on to the horizon, and straight before me the sun round and crimson, had just touched the earth.

The road was very lonely, and as I could only see one solitary human being approaching me in the distance, I quickened my steps, for Mrs. Fanshawe was apt to be nervous when I was out late. As he approached I perceived it was a tall man, wrapped in a plaid. My eyes were too much dazzled by the sun for me to see his face, but I thought he was looking earnestly at me. He walked a few steps past me, and then returned saying, "Will you kindly direct me to Mrs. Leedon's cottage at Earlswood?"

I turned round and looked at him, then I involuntarily held out my hands. They were warmly clasped and in a moment I was pressed to his breast.

"Harry!"

"Nellie Darling, are you glad to see me again?"

SOME fellow mortal, with a just appreciation of the great sin of cheating the printer, and a laudable desire to reform the world, gets off the following:

The man who cheats the printer
Out of a single cent,
Will never reach that heavenly land
Where old Elijah went.

He will not gain admittance there,
By devils he'll be driven,
And made to loaf his time away
Outside the walls of heaven.

Without a man to greet him,
Without a pleasant grin,
The happiness that he will reap
Will be almighty thin.

He'll have to eat the thistle
Of sorrow and regret,
He'll have to buck around right smart,
With cussedness, "You bet!"

A Woman's Love.

[From the Saginaw (Mich.) Courier.]

Some few days since a well-dressed gentleman, apparently in well-to-do circumstances, came to this city from some point on the shore, where he had been engaged in lumbering operations, in a feeble state of health, and has since been confined to his bed. Recently his condition was such that, although the attending physician saw no immediate cause of fear, the patient was disposed to feel that there was a probability of an early dissolution, and that death at any time might terminate his earthly suffering. So strong had this feeling grown that the unfortunate man communicated to the attending physician his fears, and requested him to convey the news gently to a lady in Romeo, Mich., whom he loved more dearly than life. He cautioned him against broaching the matter too rudely, as she was a tender flower, and the shock might be too great for her sensitive nature. The doctor made a careful minute of all these requests, and in strict observance of all these injunctions, wrote to the lady as desired. The answer came back promptly and to the point, as follows:

Dr.———, I care nothing for that Mr. D———, nor to hear from him. You will please tell him to send no more word. Miss P———.

P. S.—Kill him.

The doctor, it scarcely need be added, was touched with this unexpected display of affection on the part of the tender-hearted maiden, so touched, indeed, that he has not felt like communicating with the sick man on the subject. If the condition of the latter was at all critical in the start, it was charitable to suppose that this letter would affectually dispose of him. As the doctor does not care to follow the feminine advice, but, on the contrary, hopes to restore his patient to health, he has concluded to keep the result of his correspondence a secret.

THE Danbury News says: Looking over an old ledger, we see a long array of names of former subscribers who are indebted to us. Some of them have moved away and are lost to sight, although to memory dear. Others are carrying the contribution boxes in our most respectable churches, and others again, have died, and are now angels in Heaven, but they owe us just the same.

A LADY made a complaint to Frederick the Great, King of Prussia: "Your majesty, said she," "my husband treats me badily." "That's none of my business," replied the King. „But he speaks ill of you," said the lady. "That," replied he, "is none of your business."

TWENTY-FIVE cases of small pox were reported in New York last week.

COOKING FOOD FOR STOCK.—The advantage of cooking food for stock, especially milch cows and young stock, is fast becoming one of the settled questions in agriculture. We hardly know a dairyman who does not pour boiling water over his cut hay and meal or bran, even if he does not cook it by steaming. It is found to economise feed, to increase the flow of milk, and promote appetite. Cows will eat much more of cut hay and feed steamed or moistened with boiling water, than they will of dry food, and we hold it is the true policy of the dairyman to induce his cows to eat as much as possible, as the more they take in by way of food, the more will be given out in the form of milk. To stint cows at all in an ample supply of proper food to keep up nutrition, and promote milk secretion, can only be called "a penny wise and pound foolish" policy. It will not pay. When roots are also boiled or steamed, the nutritive matter they contain is more fully developed, and the same weight of roots produces larger results, both in the condition of the cow and in her milk secretion.—Practical Farmer.

A QUAKER PRINTER'S PROVERBS.—Never sendest thou an article for publication without giving the editor thy name, for thy name oftentimes secures publication to worthless articles.

Thou shouldst not rap at the door of a printing office, for he that answereth the rap sneereth in his sleeves and loseth time.

Never do thou loaf about, ask questions or knock down type, or the boys will love you like they do shade trees—when thou leaveth.

Thou shouldst never read the copy on the printer's case, or the sharp and hook-container there of, or he may knock thee down.

Never inquire thou of the editor for the news, for behold it is his business at the appointed time to give it to thee without asking.

It is not right that thou shouldst ask him who is the author of an article, for it is his duty to keep such things unto himself.

When thou dost enter his office, take heed unto thy self that thou dost not look at what may be lying open and concerneth thee not, for that is not meet in in the sight of good breeding.

Neither examine thou the proof sheet, for it is not ready to meet thine eye that thou mayest understand.

FOWLS.—Fowls to be fattened, should be shut up in flocks of twelve, in a light, airy pen, five by six feet; feed them three times a day all they will eat (no more) on scalded horse feed. Mix with this plenty of powdered charcoal. At night throw them all the corn they will pick up. Furnish plenty of gravel and pure water, and in one week they will do for market. The yellow legged fowls will always look best when fat.

THE highest evidence of the truth of christianity is to be found in its practical bearings upon the heart and lives of men. No one can study the gospels of Christ with a heart open to the reception of the truth when recognized, without feeling that God must be the author of such an economy that has Christ for its perfect exemplar, salvation for its theme, and in its fruition, alike gives "Glory to God in the Highest, on earth, peace, good will toward men."

SOME men evince a moral heroism in their lives, amounting to grandeur, making even their ill-success serve only to nerve them to redoubled effort, in the same channel, or to direct their steps with renewed energy to other fields of activity; and happy is he, when success crowns the result, that bears meekly the honors that await him, and can look back upon the achievements of the past with no undue elation.

IF we would work for God and truth in the highest sense, we must draw inspiration from the source of truth; that by vital union with Christ, His life and power and grace may be poured out anew upon the world through our lives;—He the vine, we the branches; and our success or the results following, will be measured by the nearness we keep to Him.

SUCCESS in any calling must be acquired. To escape toil is too often the supreme wish, and the false notion obtains that there are pursuits which yield honor and profit without labor. This is often the fatal error of young men. They should enter upon life with the conviction rooted and grounded in them that there is no excellence without application.

SECRETARY BOUTWELL has written a letter to some of his friends in Massachusetts, saying that he will be thankful for the support of those members of the Legislature who judge that he is qualified to represent the State in the United States Senate.

MORAL AND RELIGIOUS.

—Hard work made compulsory by daily want, is God's chief school of character.

—Opinion is a medium between knowledge and ignorance.

—He who seeks to build his reputation on the failings of another, has an unsafe foundation.

—Lay by a good store of patience, but be sure to keep it where you can place your hand on it.

—God hath made many fair flowers, but the fairest of them all is heaven, and the flower of all flowers is Christ.

—Love that has nothing in it but beauty to keep it in good health is short-lived, and apt to have ague fits.

—Cheerfulness makes the mind clearer, gives tone to thought, and adds grace and beauty to the countenance.

—Let me ask every day what reference it has to the day of judgment, and cultivate a disposition to be reminded of that day.

—It is a great mistake to set up our own standard of right and excellence, and judge people accordingly.

—A good head, a warm heart, and a strong will in a happy combination, are elements of a successful man.

—It was the remark of a great and good man, "I had rather do the will of God than to work miracles."

—He makes himself to be his own worst enemy, who suffers a vicious habit to gain the ascendency in his conduct.

—There is nothing so restraining to vice, so disciplinary upon life, as honest, life long efforts with the hands, the head or the heart.

—Our aspirations, our yearning affections, our capabilities are so many promises of God that the time will come when they shall have their happy fulfillment.

—He only is advancing in life, whose heart is getting softer, whose blood warmer, whose brain quicker, and whose spirit is entering into living peace.

—Idleness hath no part with godliness. The injunction is equally positive "six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work," as the command to refrain from the same on the seventh.

—Temptations resisted and overcome are in the formation of character what exercise is to the muscles; they but serve to strengthen and intensify the force of the moral principle in us.

—Some readers in their habits are like butterflies; others like bees. The former get over a good deal of ground, but the latter gather food for the mind that the superficial thinker knows not of.

—We pity the man with whom memory is but an empty garret or a confused lumber room heaped up with accumulated things so hopelessly mingled that its owner can never lay hands on what he needs for the moment.

—How great a bounty and a blessing it is so to hold the royal gifts of the soul, that they shall be music to some and fragrance to others, and life to all, dispersing happiness to those about us which they cannot create for themselves.

—It is not only a sentiment enjoined as a duty by the Christian religion, but it is highly philosophical as well, to cultivate a spirit of trust—of trust in our own powers and resources to cope with life; of trust in the Divine care and goodness that controls all its events.

—Never trifle with or seek to suppress the first suggestions of conscience, which in the main are on the side of truth, and when in doubt as to the propriety of an act wherein duty or right may be violated, better far take the benefit of the doubt, and do not do it.

—Bear constantly in mind the thought, "Thou, God, seest me!" Let it quicken the sense of thy responsibility to God. 'Twill be a beacon of good to throw light upon the shoals and quicksands of life, before thy frail bark of humanity is stranded upon them unawares.

—God is never in a hurry. It comes of our unbelief in Him that we are apt to be in a hurry. He that believeth should not be in haste. If we look at the history of the material world, or the intellectual world, or the social world, nothing is clearer than that God was never in a hurry, and He can afford to wait.

—"Be not over anxious," is the voice of Providence, as the possible ills we feared might be our lot, are safely passed unrealized save in our fears. Yet how slow we are to learn the lesson of trust in the Divine care, each recurring trouble and difficulty awakening our solicitude to know the end, the same as before.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS.—The New York World has a novel plan for diminishing railroad accidents. It proposes to require of each road a bond to pay for all lives lost by accidents upon its line. It estimates every life destroyed in this way to be worth to the State $4,500, and this sum it proposes shall be recovered as a penalty. The sums so recovered should be invested for the benefit of the helpless survivors. It "ventures to predict" that the "practical operation of such a system, by making it cheaper to protect life than to destroy it, would be to prevent the occurrence of any such casualties in the future." We are perfectly willing to see it tried.

AN International Exhibition is to be held in Madrid in 1875, when Spain, which for so many years traveled the downhill road of decay and decline, proposes to show the world what she can still display of art and industry. Her wisest statesmen have seen other nations winning ample profit by these gatherings of the products of labor and skill from their own and friendly lands, and hope that the Castilian race may receive a healthy impulse from a similar show, and be removed to a renewal of that spirit of enterprise which in former days made the Spanish name and speech emblems of power the world over.—N. Y. Herald.

MR. JAMES BROOKS, the Congressman who, according to the testimony thus far introduced before the Credit Mobilier Investigating Committee, appears to be the most seriously compromised, and who is shown to have been a goverment director of the Union Pacific Railroad, by appointment of President Johnson, at the time when he is charged with purchasing the Credit Mobilier stock—last year made a tour around the world.—Writing to his paper from India concerning the radical reformation which the introduction of railroads was effecting in that country, he said they were "leveling heathenism, and might, by-and-by, bring it up to Christianity." In the United States their influence and tendency would seem to be, among some people, of quite an opposite character. Wonder if Mr. Brooks contemplates paying a second visit to the land of the Hindoos?—Commercial.

A MINISTER SENTENCED AS A KU-KLUX.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, who is making a tour of the Southern States, writes from Columbia, S. C., an interesting account of the recent trial and conviction of nine Ku-Klux prisoners. Among these was a Baptist minister, concerning whom the correspondent says: The next case was that of the Rev. John S. Ezell, a prominent Baptist minister of Spartanburg, a man of ability, intelligence, and influence with his flock. His counsel submitted affidavits and petitions in his behalf, praying for mercy. The reverned gentleman himself read a written statement, telling all about his connection with the Klan. He had joined because nearly everybody else in the country belonged to it, and he thought it a good thing. He repeated the oath of the Klan, which is the same as heretofore published, binding the parties to forever oppose the Republican party, to stand by the Constitution as originally made by our forefathers, to do all in their power against the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendment, protect women, regulate society, prevent crime, &c. The penalty for divulging any of the secrets, oaths, grips, and passwords of the Klan was death. He had joined in 1871. Had never been on a raid, never saw one, and nobody could complain of any act of his; but by joining and participating in the Klan councils he had prevented many persons from being troubled. He had visited other Klans in adjoining counties, but had never attended a Grand Council, which was made up of representatives from subordinate Klans. He said he was now sorry that he had ever belonged to such an organization, that it had turned out not to be such a good thing as he at first supposed. One object in joining was to restrain young men and prevent them from going to extremes.

[At this, a voice among the negroes exclaimed. "that's too thin!"]

"Judge—"Have you now a congregation?"

"Yes sir; my church and congregation are at Spartanburg."

"How many of your congregation belong to the Ku Klux?"

"I do not know; but the most of them, I suppose. Nearly everybody in that neighborhood had joined the Klan, and among them are, of course, a number of my congregation."

"Did you ever preach from the pulpit against the organization or any of its acts?"

"No, sir; for if I had been disposed such a course would not have been safe. Nor, indeed did I believe there was safety outside the Klan."

"Do you now think you should not have joined?"

"From the turn matters have taken, I think I would have been better off not to have joined."

"Did you ever know any other clergyman to belong to it?"

"No, sir."

"Didn't the Rev. Mr. Carpenter run away for fear of being arrested for belonging to it?"

"Oh, yes, but he is a Methodist; I am a Baptist minister." [Laughter.]

"Then, if you did not agree in theology, you agreed in the creed of the Ku-Klux, didn't you?"

"Well, yes sir; it would appear so.'

"Did yo ever advise the breaking up of the organization?'

"Yes, sir; I haye attended no meeting of the Klan since June last, when I advised that it be broken up."

"This was after the act of Congress was passed, was it not?"

"Yes, sir."

"If it was a charitable organization,' or good organization, why the need of breaking it up."

"Because in some localities it was being carried too far."

The judge was silent for a moment, as if not certain what course to take with the sorrow stricken preacher who stood pale and penitent before him. He then said: "Mr. Ezell, I find myself placed in a very embarrassing position. Other parties, your inferiors in intellect, influence, and everything else—these prisoners here I have sentenced—these young men had a right to look up to you for advice, and you should have counselled them to have kept clear of such a murderous organization. Instead of this, I find that you have been a member of the Klan, sitting in its counsels, and encouraging it with your presence. You appeal to me for mercy, although you show no good reason why you should have mercy. You must make your appeal for mercy to the President. I can show you no leniency here.—The sentence of the Court is that you be fined $500, and be imprisioned five years."

TWENTY YEARS AND NO LICENSE

We clip, from one of our exchanges, the following letter which we think will interest our readers at this time, as the question of "License or no License" is soon to come before the people of this county for their decision one way or the other, and it is a question of vital importance, affecting, as it does, the interest and well-being of every man, woman and child in our midst, and we should not desire that it should go by default. A victory is not half a victory which is won through the apathy or indifference of our opponents. This letter was written by a son of John Mann. He is a leading lawyer, now representing, with two others, his senatorial district in the Constitutional Convention:

COUDERSPORT, Potter Co., Pa.

O. N. WORLEN—My Dear Sir: Your favor, making enquiry as to the result of the Temperance effort in this county, was duly received. It gives me pleasure to inform you that no license to sell intoxicating drinks has been granted by our Court since January, 1852. This position was taken and maintained, for fifteen years, by electing Associate Judges opposed to license. The names of the two Judges who had the principle and the nerve to make this righteous decision, and to stand by it for ten years, are Orange Lewis and Joseph Mann. No two men ever served the people more effectually.

In 1866, being a member of the Legislature, I deemed it wise and just to put the oft-repeated decision of the voters of this county, on this vital question, on the Statute Book, and you may see, on page 658 of the Pamphlet Laws of 1863, the prohibitory law of Potter county. The passage of this act excited the advocates of free drinking to great activity for its repeal; but there it stands, a shield to all the youth of the county against the temptation to form drinking habits. And it will undoubtedly long remain, a blessing to all and comfort to nine-tenths of our people; for, under its benign influence, the number of tipplers is steadily decreasing, and fewer young men begin to drink than when licensed houses gave respectability to the habit. There are but few people who keep liquor in their houses for private use, and there is no indication that the number of them has increased since the traffic was prohibited.

This is as readily enforced as are the laws against gambling, licentiousness, and others of a similar character. In every instance, the prosecution for selling liquor without license, has been successful when there was the proper proof. There is, unquestionably, greater difficulty in proving the offense than many others, because the business of buying and selling whisky contrary to law is more demoralizing than most other criminal habits. The man who sells, under such circumstances, expects the person who buys, in case of every ten, who will ask a man to violate the law of the State in order to gratify their appetite for strong drink will not disappoint this expectation. This humiliating fact of itself, is sufficient to condemn the whole traffic. I know a good many men that will tell the truth upon every subject except this one of buying a drink of whisky, as to which they will swear, as serenely as a summer morning, that what they bought was "medicine" prepared and ordered by 'the Doctor.' If it was not for the tenth man, whose conscience is stronger than his appetite, whom we have always found, it would be almost impossible to obtain proof against a man low enough to prostitute the practice of medicine to the sale of intoxicating drinks. But, as before mentioned, the only difficulty experienced in enforcing the law on that subject in this county has been to secure the proof.

There is no open violation of the law and the consumption of strong drink has decreased very materially in consequence of our prohibition of the traffic.

Decidedly the best hotels ever maintained in the county have been opened since licenses were refused, and there are now in Coudersport (our county seat) as good hotel accommodations as as are to be found in Northern Pennsylvania.

The experience of this county is conclusive that there is no shadow of ground for fearing any lack of good hotels should license to sell liquors be withheld.

Not a single interest of the county has suffered from our no license policy. On the other hand, all the higher interests of society have been largely promoted. Crime of all grades has decreased, as is abundantly proved by an examination of the records of our criminal courts.

And if we could shut out the influence of surrounding counties, or convert them to our side, on this question, I do not believe there would be business enough of that kind to induce any capable lawyer to accept the office of District Attorney.

It is, unfortunately, true that there is considerable drinking and some drunkenness in this county, but, with more than double the population, there is less than half the drunkenness that existed under the license system.

An intelligent man who will attend court at Coudersport, and then attend court in any place where the hotels have license to sell intoxicating drinks, will admit that our system does, unmistakably, lessen intemperance and promote good order. As it is here on court week, so it is throughout the entire county the year round—peace, good order, and prosperity are, in a marked manner, promoted by our prohibition of the legal sale of strong drink.

Very truly yours, for temperance and prosperity. JNO. S. MANN.

NEWS ITEMS.

—A scientific journal computes that we can go on burning coal thirty-five hundred years longer without exhausting the supply.

—In a letter from the Galapagos Islands the writer remarks the wonderful tameness of all the wild creatures that have hitherto been unmolested. The seals, he says, seemed to be fond of crawling under bushes, just above high-water mark, sleeping two or three hours in a place. Under one bush lay a mother and cubs, and so fearless was the old one that when one of the officers held a piece of cracker to her nose she smelled at it as fearlessly as if she had been a pet dog. The tameness of many of the birds was also surprising, for the fingers might be put within half an inch of little yellow birds and within six inches of mocking birds.

—A new avenue of employment is now opened to women. The proprietor of a hotel at Holyoke, Mass., weary of the insufferable impudence to guests of one of his male clerks, bethought him to try the experiment of putting a lady in that position. A young lady was employed, who not only attended to all her office dutics faithfully and well, but also had charge of the large library. The guests say no one ever looked so well after comfort as the lady clerk has done. Another result of her presence at the desk was the frequent gathering in the office of the lady guests of the house, thus banishing smoking and "horse talk" among the gentlemen.

—Philadelphia has begun her preparations for the Centennial Exposition in good earnest. A committee of 300 has been appointed, who have set to work, and will leave nothing undone to make the exposition a grand success. In the committee every trade and profession is represented. They have called upon the ladies to organize and assist them. A prominent manufacturer offers a plan for a column one thousand feet high, to be made of iron net work, in which is to be placed a Drummond light to illuminate Fairmount Park and the grounds of the exposition. His plan is said to be practicable by the scientific men who have examined it, and it will doubtless be erected, giving Philadelphia the loftiest monument in the world.

—The once famous lion tamer, Herr Driesbach, is now residing at Worcester, Ohio. His settlement there is the result of a love affair. While traveling through the country a number of years ago, he was waited upon at her father's hotel table by a handsome young woman. Driesbach was enamored by her charms, and not many months thereafter they were married. He continued to travel, she accompanying him, until about seven years ago, when he renounced the show bnsiness, never, he says, to take to the road again. Being unfortunate in his ventures, he lost almost all that he ever made, and has settled down to the more peaceful and quite vocation of a farmer. He is happy and contented with his wife and two children.

EDITED BY EDWARD E. HALE.

The enlarged resources placed in the hands of the OLD AND NEW, by the public and by the proprietors, enable them to announce a volume of wider interest than they have ever published.

A series of Short Stories by Miss Meredith, Mrs. Stowe, Mrs. Whitney, Miss Hale, Mr. Perkins, Mr. Loring and others, has been engaged.

Mr. Marineau's Series will be continued on "The Church and its Exclusive Claims," "Scripture, and the Limits of its Authority," "God in Humanity," &c.

GENERAL NEWS

—Four eclipses this year.

—Mars will be the morning star until the 17th inst.

—Now is the time to scratch your hogs backs.

—A Sacramento apple-tree has borne six crops of fruit this year.

—The roof of a large building in Harrisburg, used as a store-house, was crushed in by snow a few days ago.

—There were 204 deaths in Boston last week, sixty being from small-pox.

—A man in Duluth can't get into good society until he owns twelve corner lots.

—The Pope declines to receive the annuity guaranteed him by the Italian Parliament.

—Virginia, which didn't have a cotton factory before the war, has erected twelve of them since.

—The Secretary of the Treasury says that the percentage of loss in collecting the revenue since March 3d, 1869, is less than two dollars on a thousand.

—San Francisco milk is so badly adulterated that the cows blush to think that their names are used to cover so vile a fraud.

—Life, according to the Arabic proverb, is composed of two parts; that which is past, a dream; and that which is to come, a wish.

—Recent trials in New York prove their most powerful fire-engines unable to throw water to the top of their very high buildings.

—Postmasters are forbidden by law to deliver letters addressed to initials or fictitious names, unless sent to the care of some responsible person.

Preserve your conscience always soft and sensitive. If but one sin force its way into that tender part of the soul, and is suffered to dwell there, the road is paved for a thousand more iniquities.

—The Agricultural Bureau estimates the wheat crop of the United States the present year at 240,000,000 bushels, raised on 20,000,000 acres. The oat crop aggregates 265,000,000 bushels.

—Under the postal regulations, where transient or irregular postage matter reaches its destination unpaid double the prepaid rate will be exacted on delivery. Make a note of this.

—It is not generally known that the leaves of the coffee plant are coming to be used like the berries, and in some coffee growing lands, Java for instance, are preferred by the natives to the choices berry for making the favorite decoction.

—An injunction was granted in New Haven last week to prevent the holding of a wake over the body of a dead man. The injunction was applied for and obtained by a relative of the deceased. And this in a free country, in the latter part of the nineteenth century.

—There are twenty-six head of horses on President Grant's farm near St. Louis, and the Times of that city says not a single one of them has had the epizooty, while on all the farms adjacent every horse has been sick. That paper thinks "there never was such a fellow for luck."

—The sharpest, so far, this month, is the Troy girl who makes her unsuspecting father the daily bearer of sweet misses to a clerk in his employer's house. She pins the letter in the old man's cloak, and when he reaches the office and throws off the garment, the clerk gets it, and responds by the same carrier.

—Gold is found in no less than thirteen States of the Union, namely in Vermont, Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Kansas, Nebraska, Nevada, Oregon and California. During the last twenty-four years, California has produced the immense amount of $643,121,449 value of the precious metal.

More negro trespassing on the domains of the whites. Here is a Springfield, Massachusetts, colored man who has actually had the audacity to invent an improved steam valve for locomotives, by means of which the steam pressure is removed from the top of the valve, and the wear and tear of the machinery are greatly reduced. What is the country coming to?

—In the happy land of Canaan, N. H. dwells a peaceful citizen sixty years of age, who sees the locomotive pass in view every day, but has never ridden in the cars or a stage coach, and has never had a lawsuit. In fact he has never been forty miles from home, and, yes he is tolerably happy, and says the local paper, "is a man of business and highly esteemed." Well it isn't every man that can spend his three-score years in Canaan, or we might all be happy.

—The Pacific Railroad thinks it can defy the snows this winter, even if they are severe as those of last. Over the mountains it has raised its track for one hundred miles from two to seven feet, so that the winds will keep it clear; snow-sheds over the track have been built for an aggregate distance of fifteen miles; the snow-fences have been extended to eighty miles, and monster snow-plows of a weight of thirty-five tons are building to open the blockade, that may, in spite of all the rest, come from long and severe storms.

500! 500! 500! 500! 500!

Manufactured and Sold Daily, of the

NEW IMPROVED ELIAS HOWE SEWING MACHINE!

THE GREATEST PRODUCTION OF INVENTIVE GENIUS, POINTS OF SUPRIORITY, BEAUTY, CONVENIENCE & DURABILITY. IT WILL LAST A LIFE TIME.

ALL of its wearing parts are made of hardened steel, has no Cog Wheels to Break or Rattle; great adjustability, (self-adjusting take-up) adjustable needle-head, will sew light or heavy goods perfect; makes the nicest hem or fell; will gather and sew on, Cord, Tuck, Braid, Binde, Embroider, or will do any kind of work, even make Crotchet Work Perfect.

This Machine makes the celebrated Lock-stitch—the stitch invented by Mr. Howe—alike on both sides. The shuttle tension is upon the thread as it leaves the shuttle, and not upon the bobbin, as in most machines; and this tension is invariable, whether the bobbin be full or nearly empty. It is obtained by turning a screw in the shuttle, and can be changed in a moment, without taking out the work, breaking the thread, or threading through holes.—This Machine is now hung on hinges, and the trouble of taking it from the table to clean and oil obviated.

What we claim, in substance, is, that this is an Honest Machine, and if put in your family, will do any and all of your work perfectly, will last a lifetime, is a willing and ready servant, and is not subject to FITS.

Persons who have tried all machines are unanimous in declaring this to be the easiest learned of any in the market. In the majority of cases customers learn from the instruction book without further aid.

This Machine is now for sale in your county by Traveling Agents. If you are not called on by them, and you want the Best Machine for the amount of money you pay out, please address I. F. PALMER & CO., Bellefonte, Pa., or, Philipsburg, Pa., either of which places you may live nearest to, and your order will receive prompt attention in person.—Our Machines are sold on easy terms—either by monthly installments, or by NOTE, CASH or PRODUCE at Market Prices. Needles, Oil, Thread and Extra Attachments constantly on hand at our offices. Office at Bellefonte, in Garman's Hotel Building. Call and see styles and sample work.

HOW A PAPER IS MADE.

A PEABODY.

"Pray, how is a newspaper made?"
The question is easy to ask,
But to answe. it fully my dear,
Were rather a difficult task;
And yet in a bantering way,
As the whipperwill sings in the glade,
I'll venture a bit of a lay,
To tell how a paper is made.

An editor sits at his desk,
And ponders things that appear
To be claiming the thought.ts of the world—
Things solemn, and comic, and queer—
And when he has hit on a theme
He judges it well to parade,
He writes, and he writes and he writes,
And that's how a paper is made.

An editor sits at his desk,
And puzzles his brain to make out
"Dispatches" so squabbled and mixed,
It is hard to tell what they're about.
Exchanges are lying around—
While waiting dispatches delayed,
He clips, and he clips, and he clips,
And that's how a paper is made.

An editor out in a town,
In search of the things that are new—
The things that the people have done,
The things they're intending to do—
Goes peeping and prying about
For items of many a trade;
He tramps, and he tramps, and he tramps,
And that's how a paper is made.

And all that these workers prepare,
Of every conceivable stripe,
Is sent to the printer, and he
Proceedeth to stick it in type;
His lines, all respecting his will,
In slow moving columns parade—
He sticks, and he sticks, and he sticks,
And that's how a paper is made.

In short, when the type is all set,
And errors cleared up, more or less,
Tis "locked in a form," as we say,
And hurried away to the press.
The pressman arranges his sheet,
His ink gives the requisite shade,
Then he prints, and he prints, and he prints,
And that's how a paper is made.

Imperial Jesters.

Jesting with kings, particularly uninvited—why, it was as if a swimmer, however experienced, should venture within the smooth but death-bearing current of Niagara, which inevitably carries all within its power over the falls. People have played little teasing jokes with elephants, and when the jokers have forgotten all about it, the gravely majestic beast has put his foot upon the offender, and crushed the humor out of him forever. It has been just so with malice-bearing monarchs, and with courtiers who thought they might joke with them. The incarnation of all such monarchs existed in the person of an African king named Chaka. He was given to joking at others, and woebe-tide them if they did not burst with ecstacy at the joke; but if a "fellow of infinite humor" happened to cap the royal joke with a better, Chaka broke into hilarity which ended by exclaiming, "Cut off that wretch's head; he has made me laugh." The Cæsars must have been almost as dreadfully dangerous men to joke with as Chaka. The great Julius, indeed, after he became great, had no leisure for jesting, but was the object of some popular jokes, which he took with indifference. The guests of Augustus were afraid to "crack a joke" in his presence. They would whisper one to a neighbor, and then turn pale if the Emperor invited them to "speak up."

The imperial table was as grand and dull as that of the copper Augustus, Louis XIV., and the Emperor had recourse to merry-andrews, just as the Grand Monarque had to harlequins. But the harlequins of those days were gentlemen and scholars. The grim Tiberius on the other hand, was remarkably facetious. His delight was to puzzle his learned guests with unanswerable questions, such as, "What was the name of the song the syrens sang?" and the like. Fancy half a dozen members of the Society of Antiquaries dining with His Majesty, and being gravely asked, "Who built the marble halls the Bohemian girl dreamt she dwelt in?" or "What was the Christian name of the Minstrel Boy?" and "At what period Auld Lang Syne had been young?" Nevertheless Tiberius was a nicer man to deal with than Caligula, all of whose jokes were brutally cruel in words, and oftener in deeds. What a serious joke was that when, having nothing on but the linen apron of a victim-slayer, he raised the mallet, and, instead of slaying the beast, knocked out the brains of the sacrificing priest! Claudius was too huge a feeder to have appetite for wit; but he would have eaten the whole beast that his predecessor should have killed. Yet Claudius, half beast himself, had a good deal of the scholar in him; as Nero had, who loved science, admired art, was mildly witty, and therefore as savage as an insane hyena.

We must except the occasions of his visiting the theatre, when he sat in an upper seat, and found delight in flinging nuts down upon the bald-head of the prætor below. That official was as proud of the attention, as if every nut had been an especial honor. Joyless Galba had none of the Noronic fun in him. But though not mirthful himself, Galba could smile when he heard the popular slang name, in allusion to his flat nose, "Simlus." His successor, Otho, was just such a wit as a man might be expected to be who washed his face in asses's milk. If witty men went away from him feeling dull and heavy, it was the result of their exchanging ideas with their imperial master. He had his wit at second hand, as Vitellius had, who got his jokes from a stage-player and charioteer. In more modern times, when Astley's was in its glory, and the clown of the rink a joker that people went to listen to, that circus clown got his jokes, not from his own brains, but from the Westminster boys. Jokes used to be made at Westminster as they are now at the Stock Exchange, where fresh batches are served each morning, like hot rolls. But to return to the Cæsars. Perhaps Vespasian was a greater joker than any of them, but his jokes were often broad and scurrilous. Titus was rather gracious than given to jesting, though he enjoyed one sorry joke, in promising to every suitor that his request should be granted. They went away radiant. "Every one," he said "ought to depart joyfully from the presence of his Prince;" and then, "the delight of mankind" thought no more of his promise.

The chief recreation of the gloomy Domitian was in playing dice, but he always won. Every antagonist knew what the joke would cost him if he beat the Emperor. Altogether, those twelve Cæsars were men compounded of the most opposite qualities, with a small modicum of what is called wit among the whole of them. Out of all those that followed, one alone, Hadrian, made a standing and sterling joke—a joke which has descended to us, and added a slang phrase to our vulgar tongue. To "scrape acquaintance" comes to us from Hadrian.

He was at the public baths one day, when he saw one of his veteran soldiers scraping his body with a tile. That was such poor luxury, that Hadrian ordered that his old comrade should be supplied with more suitable cleansing materials, and also with money. On a subsequent occasion, when the Emperor again went to the bath, the spectacle before him was highly amusing. A score of old soldiers who had fought under Hadrian were standing in the water, and each was currying himself with a file, and wincing at the self-inflicted rubbing. The Emperor perfectly understood what he saw, and what was the purpose of the sight. "Ha! ha!" he exclaimed, "You had better scrape one another, my good fellows!" He added, "You certainly shall not scrape acquaintance with me!"

THE most hopeful plan yet suggested for meeting of justice to murderously inclined emotional lunatics is embodied in a bill offered in the Indiana Legislature, which provides that in case of homicide where the plea of insanity is set up, and the defendant is acquitted, the jury shall specify in their verdict whether the return of "not guilty" was upon that ground.—If so, the maniac, who in an instance of uncontrolable irresponsibility slew a fellow creature, is forthwith to be committed to the lunatic asylum, not until pronounced sane by another jury, but for life, or a term of years according to the nature of the crime charged. Thus those dangerous lunatics would receive proper medical treatment, and the public would be secured against their frenzied bloodletting in the future. In that event, too, mania of such sort would doubtless be of less frequent occurrence. It may be that these sentences to the lunatic asylum would be held in operation in case of a person really sane; but it would seem, since insanity is so easily proven that the testimony of the same learned experts who satisfy the jury of the mental unsoundness of the defendant on trial might be relied upon for like service when the object was to deprive him of an opportunity to go mad again and pistol somebody.

WISHART'S PINE TREE
TAR CORDIAL,

NATURE'S GREAT REMEDY
FOR THE Throat & Lungs.

It is gratifying to us to inform the public that Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial, for Throat and Lung Diseases, has gained an enviable reputation from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, and from thence to some of the first families of Europe, not through the press alone, but by persons throughout the States actually benefitted and cured at his office. While he publishes less, so say our reporters, he is unable to supply the demand. It gains and holds its reputation—

First. Not by stopping cough, but by loosening and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter collected about the throat and bronchial tubes, which causes irritation.

Second. It removes the cause of irritation (which produces cough) of the mucous membrane and bronchial tubes, assists the lungs to act and throw of the unhealthy secretions, and purifies the blood.

Third. It is free from squills, lobelia, ipicac and opium, of which most throat and lung remedies are composed, which allay cough only, and disorganize the stomach. It has a soothing effect on the stomach, acts on the liver and kidneys, and lymphatic and nervous regions, thus reaching to every part of the system, and in its invigorating and purifying effects it has gained a reputation which it must hold above all others in the market.

NOTICE.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial,
Great American Dyspepsia Pills,
AND WORM SUGAR DROPS!

Being under my immediate direction, they shall not lose their curative qualities by the use of cheap and impure articles.

THE Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin states that the Beaver Mills and Lumber Company, consisting of H. B. Smith, George Rogers, Edmund Blanchard and Hon. William H. Armstrong, were the owners of a fourth interest of ten thousand acres pine timber land on Mosquito creek, in Clearfield and Elk counties, Pa., and have just purchased the other three-fourth interest for the sum of $450,000. Peter Herdic offered the purchasers $100,000 bonus for their contract, but they refused to sell. This shows the value of pine timber lands. The reason for the great increase in value of timber lands is the fact that pine timber is being very rapidly exhausted, and the Beaver Mill Company is wise in providing for the future, for in a short time no such opportunities will be found in this State.

SOME little excitement was occasioned last Saturday night in the vicinity of the Bush House, between porter Howard and a "white feller." The white man was drunk and made some remark to the Etheopean, at the same time striking him in the "mouf" and knocking him out of time. He rallied, however, and reinforcements coming up, he returned to the attack and came very near driving the enemy into the mill race, and victory perched upon the Etheopean banner. Howard thinks that "white feller" will let darkies alone after this.

THERE is a man in New York who boasts that he can husk ten bushels of corn per hour for ten consecutive hours. Now is a good time to boast, when there is no corn in that section of country.—But if he is anxious to for a job, and will come to this place, Messrs. Barnhart and Hoy will be glad to set him to work. There is a large amount of corn in Centre county that remains unhusked. The crows have had a "corn husking" every day.

SNOW SHOE COAL.—There has been a great scarcity of Snow Shoe coal during the past three or four weeks; but we are glad that Messrs. Sommerville & Son, who have the contract for mining, have succeeded in hiring a full force of miners, who are now working the mines to their full capacity. We congratulate the Bellefonte & Snow Shoe R. R. Co., and their customers, on this result, as it is very unpleasant to be short of coal when the mercury stands 20 degrees below zero.

ITEMS of local interest are solicited from all parts of the county. Also communications upon any other subject of interest, especially educational, social and industrial topics. Correspodents should write upon only one side of the paper, and make their letters as brief as the facts and circumstances will permit.

THE manner in which we have several times been introduced to the sidewalks during our tri-daily trips from our office to the Bush House the last week, has been really shocking to us, and caused us to sigh. How serenely we should go to our repast if a little ashes were sprinkled over those slippery places.

A MR. LEWIS WEAVER, of Clearfield county, was "shooting the old year out," and thought that a charge of a quarter of a pound of powder would facilitate old 1872 in its departure. Perhaps it did; at any rate it facilitated the amputation of his left had when the gun exploded.

EXCITEMENT IN THE WEST WARD—A couple of little girls on Monday last, attached a dog to their sled which he did not relish. When an opportunity offered the dog ran away with the sled, to the discomfort of the girls, and to the amusement of the juvenile spectators.

WE shall try to make our paper worth every cent we ask for it, and hope our friends will continue to aid us in extending its circulation. Many thanks for favors already received.

THE REPUBLICAN is printed in nice shape for binding. It will be worth while to save your home paper and have it bound—it will be very valuable for reference.

Now is the time to improve the sleighing, for you will not get any better this year.

THE walking is very dangerous; there is many a slip gets a man "on the hip."

SABBATH SCHOOL NOTES.—Mill Hall has two Sabbath Schools—one Union, the other Methodist Episcopal. The Superintendent of the Union Sabbath School teaches a Bible class of adults in the Methodist school; the Methodist Superintendent is Assistant in the Union school. The schools meet at different hours so that they may mutually aid each other in the good work, which, it is hardly necessary to say, goes prosperously forward under these Christian auspices.

—Henry Heaton, Superintendent of the Fairview Bible School, in Boggs township, which was organized on the third Sabbath of May last sends the following report:

"Our school has been kept up with interest for twenty-six Sabbaths. The average attendance over thirty-seven. The small scholars have recited 2,698 Scripture questions—most of the members have learned the Ten Commandments. A considerable number of small books have been given to the scholars as rewards for attendance and diligence in study. The school is continued through the winter months as a Bible class, open to all who can attend."

The Lumber Interests of the Interior.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 8.—Already a number of lumberman who use the Williamsport boom in getting their timber to market are here, and are actively engaged in urging the early passage of a bill reducing the price of boomage, which they claim has been increased to such a figure that it has materially interfered with the business in the region adjacent to the west branch of the Susquehanna.

A bill of similar import was up last winter and created considerable excitement throughout the State by reason of its disagreeable surroundings. Charges and counter charges were indulged in as to the means which were then used to defeat what was considered a very popular bill, and at one time Mr. Hancock, of Philadelphia, succeeded in penning the chief lobbyist of the opposition in the coat room, where he was compelled to remain until the wee sma' hours of the morning, knowing that he held a resolution which would have required the services of the sergeant-at-arms in ejecting him from the hall.

The lumbering interests are powerful, and they have succeeded in getting a letter from J. Edgar Thompson, denying that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has any interest in keeping up the high rates of toll which are exacted by the Susquehanna Boom Company.—Phila. Evening Bulletin.

DEDICATION.

Jacob C. Walker, of Boggs township, called at our office this week and presented us with the following facts:

The United Brethren Church, at Boggs township, Wallace Run, is to be dedicated January, 19th inst., services to commence at 10 o'clock a. m. Elder Jackson will be present and address the audience.

It is hoped that all interested in the cause of Christ and his religion will attend this dedication service. This little church is in debt, and it is the desire of its people to make a successful effort at this time to raise money enough to pay off the debt, so that the society may start on its voyage prosperously. No one who assists in this noble work will ever have cause to regret it, for it will be like bread cast upon the waters, and will return to them again in blessings, and the truth of the old adage will be proven, "that it is more blessed to give than to receive."

MURDOCK LITERARY ASSOCIATION.—A number of young men met at the rooms lately occupied by the Young Men's Christian Association, last Monday evening, to organize a literary society to be called the Murdock Literary Association. J. C. Kauffman was elected President, Wm. Rankin, Vice President, and Newton Gordon, Secretary. We wish this new society a right hearty God-speed. We believe it to be the very best discipline a young man can have, to talk about men, places, principles, books, the past and the future. It will open a new life of knowledge, duty and pleasure, and out from its numbers, we feel confident, will go intelligent men to fill honorable places and be useful members of society. Let the torch of intelligence be kept brightly burning, and let each member vie with the other in introducing new and useful topics of investigation, and in cherishing a love of reading, study and improvement.

GRAIN.—Our grain merchants have been doing a lively business. The price paid for wheat, two dollars per bushel, has induced our Brush and Penns Valley farmers to turn out in force. During the past fortnight the mills of Messrs. T. R. Reynolds & Co., and the warehouse of John D. Lieb have been besieged with sleds waiting their turn to unload. We are glad to know that our farmers in the extreme south eastern part of the county find it profitable to sell their grain in Bellefonte, and we shall be twice glad if they will call on us and subscribe for the REPUBLICAN.

THE side walks are in a dangerous condition, a perfect glare of ice constituting the footing upon which all pedestrians tread. It is a good time for the exemplification of that biblical proverb that the wicked stand in slippery places.

A CENTRE COUNTY sportsman recently shot an eagle which measured seven feet four inches from tip to tip of wings.

LOCAL OPTION.

MR. EDITOR:—The question of temperance is now being agitated by the prohibitionists of our county, and our citizens are being urged to turn out at the ensuing election for the purpose of voting against the granting of license. It seems to me it would be well to consider what would be the result in the event that our county should vote against the granting of license. It is true, in the event that a majority of the voters of the county vote against license, our courts will refuse to grant such license for the sale of spirituous and malt liquors.

This accomplished, will it stop the sale? Not by any means. Those who are law-abiding citizens will stop selling, but those who are not will sell as much as shall be called for, and being law-breakers, they will have less regard for decency and good order, but will sell indiscriminately to all, and in those low dens of intemperance old king alcohol will have undisputed sway.

The best license law that ever existed in this State is now on the statute books known as the Buckalew law. If this law was enforced to the letter, it would almost prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. Yet the very men who howl temperance the loudest, are the last men who ever make an effort to have the violators of the law brought to the notice of the courts. This being the fact, what reason have we to suppose that under a new law a different state of things would exist, or that those that are allowed to violate the present law with impunity, would then be restrained from so doing?

Those who are now paying license would close up, and the State will be deprived of a large amount of revenue, thereby affecting the pocket of every tax payer.

The present law cannot be improved upon if it is well enforced. I would like to know how many temperance men there are in Centre county who will sign an agreement for publication, who will obligate themselves to assist in hunting up violators of the law in case Centre county should vote "no license."

There is no use in voting to adopt a law for opinions' sake which will take a large amount of revenue out of the State Treasury, unless we have the assurance that the men who advocate its adoption will obligate themselves to see that the law shall be enforced.

Yours Respectfully,

LICENSE.

IMPROVEMENT NEEDED.—We learn that some of our business men will soon petition the Borough Council, asking them to pass an ordinance requiring the names of the streets to be placed on the building at each street crossing, also, each house, place of business and office, to be properly numbered. It is a great inconvenience for strangers to find places without these conveniences.

It is a great enconvenience to Coal Dealers, Merchants, Newspaper Men, &c., to send their commondoties to the residences of our citizens, unless their employees are thoroughly acquainted and such employees are not always to be had. Will the Council please act without further solisitation? We hope so.

AN! here is another of the astonishing young female farmers—a curly haired blonde in Pittsfield, Mass. She manages a farm, plants and digs potatoes, hoes corn, can swing a scythe, and is great at driving horses; she feeds the stock, does the dairy work, and draws the wood in winter. Last week when the quicksilver was down to zero, this noble virgin was seen starting for the woods with her horse and sled, "the rosiest, heartiest, healthiest and happiest young woman in Berkshire." It is stated that she is not engaged, which demonstrates to our mind that the Berkshire young gentlemen are sadly deficient in common sagacity.

WE have received a letter from our Boston correspondent which is crowded out for want of room. He says that the weather has been very cold. The small pox is not abating but is rather on the increase. The night after Christmas was "bitter cold;" the snow had fallen to a great depth, the streets were deserted, when ringing out on the midnight air came the alarm of fire, and the new Small Pox Hospital, which had just been finished and was all ready for the reception of patients, was burned to the ground. The rebuilding of the Hospital was immediately commenced and was finished and delivered by the contractors to the city last Monday.

SINGING.—During last week, the citizens of Jacksonville and vicinity, were entertained at the Presbyterian church by a singing class which was conducted by Rev. J. K. Millet, assisted by Mrs. Dr. Holloway and Mr. Meyer with instruments. On Saturday evening a concert was given to a crowded house.—Everybody were pleased, and the singing is pronounced a great success.

WEATHER.—The weather has moderated so much within a day or two that the snow is beginning to melt.

The boys and girls seem to don long faces, as the prospects for continued sledding is not very flattering. What will Tom Burnside do when the snow is gone?

[For the REPUBLICAN.]

MR. EDITOR:—We desire to draw the attention of the public to the fact that already the lumbermen of Pennsylvania are at Harrisburg (as will be seen by the accompanying letter, taken from the Philadelphia Bulletin, which please publish in your local columns), and seem determined upon the passage of a bill reducing the price of boomage from one dollar and twenty-cents a thousand feet, to seventy-five cents, or perhaps fifty cents.

They ask such reductions for the following reasons:

1st. Because when the Governor signed the bill increasing the boomage, it was under representations made at the time, that as soon as the dam at Williamsport was paid for out of the receipts, the company would reduce the boomage thirty-five cents per thousand feet. It was only by such representations that the Governor was induced to sign the bill against the earnest protest and personal appeals of all the lumbermen not interested in the company.

2d. Because the dam was built at a cost (as alleged by said company), of $160,000, and that they have collected from said extra charge of thirty-five cents per thousand, about three hundred and fifty thousand dollars to 1871, which leaves them already about $190,000 over and above the cost of said dam.

3d. Because since the passage of the last supplement, the receipts of the boom company have not been less than $250,000 per annum, and this year will reach over $300,000.

4th. Because the lumbermen, last winter, offered to take the stock of the boom company, costing $60,000 dollars, and pay the company $500,000 for the same, and reduce the boomage to ninty cents per thousand feet.

These are some of the many reasons why this tax on lumber should be reduced. Last year, it is claimed, over three hundred million feet of lumber was driven to the Susquehanna boom, for which the boom company will receive $1.25 per thousand feet, giving to the boom company a net profit of $250,000 for the season of 1872, on a capital of $60,000. For this reason the company and its agents openly boasted that they have the money to buy the members of the Legislature, and intend to use it freely this winter to defeat any attempt to reduce this extravagant charge.

Last winter it was boldly asserted that the Penna. Railroad company were the real party in the boom company, and that they were working at Harrisburg to defeat the bill then before the Legislature. The officers of the Penna. R. R. Co., denied it at the time, and Mr. Edgar Thompson, President, when waited upon by the committee, stated clearly, and in the most explicit manner, that neither the company nor any of its officers, as far as his knowledge extended, had any interest either directly or indirectly in the boom company. His letter states the position of the company clear-and decidedly. Other members of the company have made public statements to the same effect.

No one denies the merit of the relief the lumbermen are asking; but they are told it is not merit but money that rules in our Legislative halls, and as they are spending the lumbermen's money they can afford to buy enough members to defeat the bill for reducing this onerous tax upon the entire community.

We call upon the people to watch how their members vote on this question.—There is no two sides to it. The members who vote to continue this enormous monopoly, after the facts are made known to them, may be justly charged with being bribed and bought.

LOUISIANA POLITICS.

BOTH GOVERNORS INAUCCURATED—THE CEREMONIES PASSING OFF QUIETLY.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 13.—The inauguration ceremonies passed off quietly.—Weather clear and pleasant. McEnery was inaugurated in Lafayette square.—Several thousand people were present, including many ladies. The ceremonies opened with a prayer by Bishop Milner valedictory address by Gov. Warmouth, then prayer by Bishop Pierce, followed by the inauguration address by McEnery. The oath of office was then administered, and concluded with the benediction by Rev. J. K. Gutherin.—Kellogg was inaugurated at Mechanic's Institute, the doors of which are still guarded by United States soldiers. The Senators repaired to hall of the House, acting Gov. Pinchback delivered a short valedictory, followed by Kellogg's inaugural. About fifteen hundred people were present, three fourths colored.

DEATH OF LOUIS NAPOLEON.—The late Emperor of France, Louis Napoleon, died at Chiselhurst, England, on Thursday, morning, January 9, at 10.45, as stated by the Atlantic cable. He had been under medical treatment for some time past, and had but recently undergone a surgical operation, the effects of which, it would seem, were too much for his naturally strong constitution to bear up under, and he expired as above stated. The Empress Eugenie and many of the Ex-Emperor's personal friends were present at the final scene, the grief of whom was very great.

WE attended Prof. Murdoch's, readings last Tuesday night before the Undine course. The entertainment was excellent, Mr. Murdoch is a first class reader.

HORIBLE ACCIDENT.

A MOTHER AND HER THREE CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH.

On Wednesday evening last a sad and fatal accident occurred to the family of Thomas Carr, who resides on the West Chester & Philadelphia Railroad, near Morton's station, by which Mrs. Carr and her three children were burned to death. Mrs. Carr had been very busy all day ironing clothes and had neglected to fill a lamp that she intended to use with oil. The oil, called combination fluid, and said to be non-explosive, was in a can. Mrs. Carr filled the lamp, but before doing so as a matter of precaution removed a lighted lamp to the opposite side of the table from where she was standing, and was in the act of sitting the can upon the table, when it exploded as quick as gun powder, caused no doubt by the gas from the can communicating with the lighted lamp. Three of her children were in the room at the time close to the table, and upon them and the mother the burning oil was scattered, setting their clothes on fire. Some of the neighbors heard their cries of distress, and on hastening to the house found the room on fire, Mrs. Carr in the last agonies of death, and the children burnt in a horrible manner. They extinguished the fire and did all they could to relieve the sufferers, but two of the children died soon after the accident and the third lingered until towards midnight when death relieved it of its horrible suffering. Mr. Carr, the father and husband, was in Philadelphia at the time of the accident, and the shock when he heard of the horrible death of his wife and three children, whom he had left safe and well at home in the morning, is scarcely to be imagined. There should be a special law preventing the sale of combustible oils, and where a person sells the article recommending it to be non-explosive and it proves to be otherwise, the person selling it should be punished severely. The children were quite young, aged 11, 6 and 3 years. An older daughter was in a room up stairs at the time of the disaster, and thus escaped the horrible fate of her mother and the other children.

A BURNING MOUNTAIN.

STRANGE FREAK OF NATURE NEAR CHILLICOTHE, OHIO.

Special dispatch to the Pittsburg Commercial.

CHILLICOTHE, OHIO, Jan. 13, 1873.

What is known as Copperas mountain sixteen miles from here, has been on fire internally since the first of October last, destroying all vestige of vegetation round about. No investigation has yet been made, the heat being too intense to permit of a search. Reports to-day say there was an explosion in the hill yesterday afternoon and the soil on the side upheaved, creating considerable of an apperture. No particulars are yet known here. This curious freak of nature is the wonder of all the surrouding country, for the reason that no suspicion has ever existed that coal or other combustible substances could be found in this section and no surmise can be formed as to the kind of substance that is burning.

DIED.

On Sunday, Jan. 12, in Spring township, of Consumption, Mr. John Funk, aged about 35 years.

☞BY ONE OF THE LEADING PHYSICIANS of Philadelphia city.—A careful examination of mortuary statistics establishe the fact that one adult person out of every six dies of consumption, and so alarmingly is this disease gaining the ascendancy over all other ills to which flesh is heir, that its approach to one's immediate circle is regarded with perfect horror. If you will carefully examine the records of Materia Medica you will invariably discover that the general want of success in treating diseases has not been a deficiency of pathological knowledge of the functions affected, but of a suitable compound that would act upon the disease and all the sympathetic affections.

This want has at last been met in the Bitter Wine of Iron, prepared by the celebrated Dr. E. F. Kunkle, No 259 North Ninth street, Philadelphia. This excellent compound can be taken by persons with the most delicate stomach without any debilitating effect always giving strength and largely increasing the nervous energy of the patient. In all cases of pulmonary complaints it is admirably adapted to relieve the severity of the symptoms in the advanced stages of the disease, or to arrest it in its inespiency. If you want something that will give you strength, a good appetite, build up your constitution, and in place of moroseness and a lack of energy, give you a brisk and vigorous feeling, try Kunkel's Bitter Wine of Iron. It has already received the meed of praise from thousands who have tested its virtues, and for many years maintained its reputation with unfaded popularity.

Price $1 per bottle. E. F. KUNKEL, Sole Proprietor, No. 259 North Ninth street, below Vine, Philadelphia.
